

New York Medical Malpractice – Urology Nightmare

Today's tip involves a urology nightmare that I handled involving a gentleman who started out not being able to urinate. The doctor did something that was inappropriate, and he put in something called a stent, which is a wire mesh. He put that into the urethra, through the penis into the urethra, so that this mesh, when released, opens up and it was designed to hold open the urethra and to keep the scar tissue from forming again and closing up.

I'm going to jump ahead for a moment and tell you that every single medical expert I spoke to said that this was absolutely improper. Once you put those stents in, they are designed to be permanent.

So what happened here? The doctor went in and when he realized he could not move it, he decided he was going to take out these two wire mesh stents. What do you think happened? He could not pull it out as a whole stent. He had to take out wire by wire, and in doing so, literally destroyed the inside of this young man's urethra. Because of the extensive nature of the surgical repair, he had to have massive reconstructive surgery on his penis.

During the time that this patient has to have his penis and his urethra heal, where did the urine go? They had to make an opening between his scrotum and his anus to allow the urine to come out. This otherwise healthy man, now had to go to the bathroom sitting down every single time in order for him to urinate.

That's it for today's tip about urology disasters and how a doctor's improper medical care and treatment resulted in a nightmare for this young man. So if you have questions or want to learn more about how cases like these work here in the State of New York, then I strongly encourage you to explore my website <http://www.oginski-law.com>. If you have legal questions about what happened to you, then I want you to pick up the phone and call me because I can answer your legal questions. This is what I do for a living. I answer people's questions and determine whether or not they have a basis for a possible case. So give me a call at 516-487-8207 or by email at lawmed10@yahoo.com. Have a great day.
